VoterGA Lawsuit Founders Unite w/ Pulitzer Expert Team

ATLANTA, GA – VoterGA announced today it has reunited the original founders of the Fulton County Ballot Inspection lawsuit. The original co-plaintiffs Garland Favorito and Sean Draime told the ballot inspection team they will rejoin efforts with their original attorney Todd Harding who will also represent petitioners Stacey Doran, Chris Peck, Mike Scupin, Brandi Taylor, and Trevor Terris.

The move ensures that citizen petitioners for the case will continue to drive the inspection effort and legal arguments in regards to what is best for Georgians. It helps keep the petitioners independent of attorneys and organizations that may have hidden agendas. The founders further decided they will continue to avoid any funding sources that may have political motives. Sean Draime summarized the funding concept: “We don’t want businesses, we just want patriots.”

Draime and Favorito believe the patented technology of Jovan Hutton Pulitzer will produce the most precise forensic results. Favorito explained:

“Jovan is the only expert we have found who clearly understands all details of what is needed in a forensic ballot inspection. His unique, patented technology is unmatched in the country. He has assembled a remarkable team of forensic experts who can be on site to assist VoterGA inspection team members. His technology team and our Georgia election expertise represent the perfect combination of teammates who can find the truth about Georgia ballot integrity no matter what that truth may be.”

Earlier this month VoterGA won conditional approval to inspect Fulton County mail-in ballots. The approval was based largely on four sworn affidavits from experienced Fulton poll managers who claimed they handled counterfeit ballots during the hand count audit conducted on November 14th and 15th, 2020.

The announcement means that inspection lawsuit must continue to be funded on the backs of American patriots through the VoterGA Donate tab. Plans are underway for an April 18th live streamed national fund-raising event to be broadcast from Smyrna, Georgia. Details of the event will be posted on the VoterGA.Org Events tab.
